- Lower mordent - begins on the written note, steps down (half or whole step) then returns to the written note; should be played quickly and begins on the beat
- Upper mordent - begins on the written note, steps up (half or whole step) then return to the written note; should be played quickly and begins on the beat
- Grace note - a music ornament usually played just before the main beat and printed smaller to indicate that it is melodically and harmonically nonessential

- Appoggiatura - an added note that is important melodically and suspends the principal note by a portion of its time-value, often about half. The added note is one degree higher or lower than the written note. An appoggiatura is often prefixed to a written note, printed in small character, and without the oblique stroke.
